RESOURCES

- Curriculum Lab: Educators can select their curriculum criteria from the filters provided (grade, subject, theme, etc.) and then choose a lesson/activity by selecting one of the featured images.
- The Norman Rockwell Museum Archives: The Archives primary purpose is to document the histories of Norman Rockwell, American Illustration, and the Norman Rockwell Museum, as an institution. This information is disseminated while providing source material for staff, the museum community, scholars, authors, and other interested persons who seek to evaluate the impact of Rockwell and other American illustrators activities on the history of social, cultural, and intellectual development.
- Rockwell Center for American Visual Studies: The nation's first research institute dedicated to the integrative study of American illustration and its impact in our world. The Rockwell Center's goal is to enhance and support scholarship relating to this significant art form, exploring the power of published images and their integral role in society, culture, and history, and the world of art—from the emergence of printed mass media in the mid nineteenth century to the innovations of digital media today.
